"I have often been asked if, in all wide experience as Prosecutor and a lawyer for the defense I had ever known of a case of an innecent man going to the chair. I used to answer in the negative. Hereafter I shall saw I know of one innocent man-Becker. Mr. Manton and Mr. McIntyre are both familiar with the circumstances attending the death of Becker's first wife and Mr. McIntyre says Gov. Whitman knows all the facts, too. The first Mrs. Becker, they say, died of tuberculoris after a long illness and there was nothing in the slightest degree suspicious about her death. This is vouched for by Father Mc-Donald of White Plains who was her ritual advisor in her last illness.

In the execution new and mor powerful electric apparatus will be used. The State Electrician will stand just back of the chair, two or three steps to Becker's right, ready to throw the switch. A system of signals between the death room and the power house has been arranged. Instead of the old method, by which the executioner signalled with his arm to the man in the power plant, there is a little electric button behind the chair, and above it is tacked placard bearing these directions:

"Five belle, get ready; one bell, turn on current; two bells, turn on more current; three bells, turn on less current; one bell shut off cur ...t; Jury and the opening of the investisix bells, all through."

If no further reprieve should come to Becker, he will be preceded to the chair to-morrow morning by Samuel Haynes, a Putnam County negro, who is to be executed for the murder of a woman.
